Your first three-card reading: a pocket guide

A practical reference to keep beside your physical deck. Read it here, download the text or print it as a PDF.

1. Ask an open question you can act on: “What can I try?” rather than demanding a prediction.
2. Choose Situation / Challenge / Way forward. Lay three cards left to right and note their names and orientations.
3. Describe one visible detail before looking up each meaning. Relate the meaning to its position.
4. Connect two cards, then try a different interpretation. Choose one small action and write why it fits.
5. Record the cards and your own interpretation. Revisit it after some time; compare, do not score yourself.

1. The situation

2. The challenge

3. A way forward

- Wands: energy, initiative and creativity.
- Cups: emotion, connection and relationships.
- Swords: thoughts, decisions and tension.
- Pentacles: resources, work and daily practice.
- Major Arcana: broad themes and turning points.

A reversal is not automatically bad or the opposite. Consider a blocked, inward, excessive or delayed expression. Compare it with the question and neighboring cards.

Ask: Do these cards repeat a theme, create tension or suggest a change? Which detail supports that story? What is another plausible reading?

Question: _____ Cards and positions: _____ First impression: _____ Connection and alternative: _____ Small action: _____ Later reflection: _____

One saved reflection; saving again replaces it. Saved only in this browser on this device, not synced to your account. Browser data can be cleared. Export a copy to keep it.

For entertainment and self-reflection only. Interpretations are possibilities, not predictions or professional advice.

shentarot.com

One question, three cards, a connected story · How our meanings are written